New line of saunas offers energy efficiency, sustainability, safety, and comfort with its state-of-the-art carbon far-infrared heater technology

Hoffman Estates, IL (PRWEB) April 28, 2014 – Mercola.com has unveiled its new line of saunas with three goals in mind: energy efficiency, thanks to insulating western Canadian red cedar and an efficient far-infrared heater; safety with low EMF emission; and minimal environmental impact.

“Today’s consumers want a sauna experience that they know meets the multiple requirements of safety, sustainability, efficiency, quality, and comfort. They’re concerned about energy costs. And they want to make sure they’re not stepping into an electromagnetic (EMF) ‘hot box,’” said Dr. Mercola, founder of Mercola.com, the #1 most visited Natural Health website in the world.

The new line of Vitality saunas meets all these standards and more. With its advanced far-infrared heater technology, these saunas operate on pennies a month. And the carbon-based heater technology emits very low EMFs.

Made from British Columbian western red cedar, the Vitality Infrared saunas are not only beautiful, but well-insulated because of the unique benefits of this high-quality wood. As trees are harvested for Vitality Infrared Saunas, new red cedar trees are planted in their place.

Easily installed in less than an hour, Mercola.com offers a White Glove Delivery Service for those who prefer not to unpack and set up their sauna themselves. Two- and three-person models are available and both come equipped with multicolored lights, a pre-programmable timer, and a JVC AM/FM/CD sound system for a full, rich audio experience.
