

Mercola Market Thanks First Responders and Linemen with Free Coffee

Market brings back Food Truck Friday with a Costume Party this Friday, Oct. 28

CAPE CORAL, Fla. (Oct. 26, 2022) – As a thank you to everyone working around the clock to protect and rebuild the community, Mercola Market continues to invite first responders and linemen to its café for a cup of coffee on the house. Through the end of October, anyone in uniform, or with an ID badge, is encouraged to take a well-deserved coffee break at the café, located at 125 SW 3rd Place in Cape Coral, and enjoy a free cup during store hours.

“Our community has been through a devastating event, but the progress we’ve already made is what’s keeping us so hopeful – and we have our first responders and linemen to thank for that,” says Patrick Rossi, Campus Operations Manager for Mercola. “This is just a small way for us to thank those who are doing their best to make Southwest Florida feel like home again.”

This complementary offering will continue every Thursday in the café during normal operating hours.

Mercola re-opened its doors to employees and the community just one week after Hurricane Ian hit. The café has seen an influx in customers since the storm, as many are still without internet in the surrounding area.

“We felt it was important to welcome everyone back as soon as possible,” said Rossi. “We pride ourselves on being a space for family and friends to gather, and many could use that now more than ever.”

While Mercola Market is currently re-working much of its fall and winter event schedules, it will welcome the season by bringing back its Food Truck Friday Nights this Friday, Oct. 28 with a special costume party for kids in the community. It’s also continuing to host its weekly Mid-Cape Farmer’s Market and Sunshine Market on Sundays and Tuesdays.
